FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

A Magazine for the Whole Sporting World

By Kevin Duffy · Editor & Writer

Dear reader,

Sport on Earth began with a simple refusal: no sport is too small to be covered properly. This site now carries 446 sports — 24 of them with full encyclopedia entries of history, levels and season calendars, and every one of the 446 with its own page, its own one-line guide to how it is played, and an honest note where the desk has not reached it yet. That honesty is the house rule, and this magazine keeps it: everything in these pages comes from material the site itself already carries — its desks, its news file, its league histories, its own numbers — and where the site has a gap, the magazine prints the gap rather than filling it.

Inside Issue 1 you will find a tour of the whole place. Pieces from the site's desks — a first selection up front and a second later in the issue — lightly edited into magazine form and printed with the bylines and dates the data carries. A data section built from the site's own summaries — the metrics exactly as the pieces stated them. The verified histories of all 44 leagues the site keeps on file. And a spotlight spread for every single one of the 446 sports, each named, each with its real state on the site: its leagues, its desk pieces, its news and its verified videos.

After the spotlights, the tour walks the rest of the building: Training, the Rehab Hub, the Expert Guides, the Games room, the Lab, the Living Story, Green Initiatives and the Writing desks — described only as they exist, nothing promised that is not there.

One world, every sport. Turn the page.

MASTHEAD

Who Makes Sport on Earth

The masthead, as the site itself prints it — one name, because one name is what the site carries.

ROLE	NAME
Editor & Writer	Kevin Duffy

Sport on Earth's public masthead (at /masthead/) lists Kevin Duffy as Editor and Writer. Writer applications are taken by email to sportonearth@gmail.com, as the masthead page itself says. No other person is named on the masthead, and this magazine names no other person in its own editorial voice — the athletes, desks and leagues in the features that follow appear exactly as the site's own material carries them.

How to read this issue

On screen, one page shows at a time: use the Next page / Previous page buttons, tap the left or right edge of the screen, swipe, or use the arrow keys. The slider and the page box jump straight to any page, and the Contents (page 2) jumps to every section. The printable PDF linked from the reader carries the identical pages, one magazine page to one PDF page.

The magazine is free to read in full. It is regenerated from the site's data by scripts/build_magazine.py, so a future issue is a re-run, not a rebuild.

The desk file (desk.json) holds 335 pieces across 24 sports: 43 columns, 249 stories and 43 desk interviews, each printed under the byline and date its desk file carries. The news file (news.json) holds 1055 sourced items across 51 sports. The summaries file (summaries.json) carries an executive summary for all 538 pieces — 504 of them state metrics of their own, 2093 metric rows in total, and the rest list takeaways only, with no numbers added to fill the grid.

The sport-video sweep (sport-videos.json) lists 12,055 verified-playable videos across all 446 sports — every embed on the site passed the playability rule before listing. The league player directories built in this expansion stand at 17 directory pages under the league pages.

The NBA G League Notebook: A League in Its Own Image

NBA G League Desk · NBA G League · Sport on Earth

November 2, 2026

Every league desk keeps a notebook that is not really about results. This is ours for the NBA G League. The census record this site carries describes its sport in one line — Five players per side shoot a ball through a hoop 3.05 m high. Players dribble or pass; points are worth 1, 2, or 3. — and files it under Basket & net, in the basket family of sports. One line is a discipline: before the desk argues about a league, it has to say what the league is.

The league’s own file begins: Founded in 2001 as the National Basketball Development League (NBDL); renamed NBA D-League in 2005 and NBA G League in 2017. Notebooks are for the present tense, but a league’s present is mostly its founding decisions still working themselves out — the notebook keeps returning to that line the way a tongue returns to a loose tooth.

The Long Roll: Super Bowl champions and the Weight of Pittsburgh Steelers

NFL Desk · NFL · Sport on Earth

November 2, 2026

Every roll of honor is an argument about time, and the super bowl champions roll — 60 editions counted from the record this site carries, running from 1966 to 2025 — argues louder than most. At the top of it sits Pittsburgh Steelers with 6 titles, 10.0% of every edition ever decided. The rest of the roll is the story of everyone who ever tried to move them.

The roll begins in 1966, when Green Bay Packers took the first edition, beating Kansas City Chiefs. It reaches the present with the 2025 edition, won by Seattle Seahawks over New England Patriots (29–13). Between those bookends, 23 different winners have written their names into it — and 8 of them managed it exactly once, which is its own kind of immortality.

Triple-A Baseball: Reading the Leaderboards

MiLB Triple-A — International League Desk · MiLB Triple-A — International League · Sport on Earth
Date as carried in the desk file: none stated

Our Triple-A Baseball list is built the honest way: straight off the verified 2025 leaderboards for the International League, with no names added and none held back.

Justin Crawford headlines the batting-average board, and the list follows the leaderboards in order — average, on-base, slugging, OPS, games and plate appearances — so every name here earned its place in print.

COLUMN · ICE HOCKEY

Institutions Outlive Seasons: A Column on the NCAA Division I hockey

NCAA Division I Desk · NCAA Division I · Sport on Earth

November 2, 2026

A column about a league should begin where the league began: NCAA founded in 1906 (as IAAUS, renamed NCAA in 1910); first NCAA men’s ice hockey championship/Frozen Four in 1948. The NCAA Division I hockey — Top college men’s ice hockey level, culminating in the Frozen Four — has since been many things, but it has never stopped being that founding decision, renewed every season.

Fans experience leagues as weather: this year’s race, this year’s scandal, this year’s champion. The record suggests a colder view. Leagues are institutions, and institutions are judged on what survives their worst decade, not what headlines their best one. By that measure the file this site carries is a survival story — absorbing Intercollegiate Athletic Association of the United States (IAAUS), precursor to the NCAA, remaking itself as the sport around it changed, and still opening for business every year.

Every name on this one — Emanuel Lasker, Alexander Alekhine, Garry Kasparov, Anatoly Karpov, Magnus Carlsen — built their total across a full career, in eras with different schedules, different equipment and different rules. The Long Roll: Masters Tournament champions and the Weight of Jack Nicklaus

Count the masters tournament champions roll the way this site carries it — 90 editions, 1934 to 2026 — and one name does the heavy lifting: Jack Nicklaus, champions 6 times. That is 6.7% of the roll's whole history, a share no argument about eras can explain away.

The roll begins in 1934, when Horton Smith took the first edition. It reaches the present with the 2026 edition, won by Rory McIlroy. Between those bookends, 57 different winners have written their names into it — and 38 of them managed it exactly once, which is its own kind of immortality.

Pete Rose and the Number That Will Not Move: MLB career hits leaders

The mlb career hits leaders table this site carries is five names long, and the first name is the story: Pete Rose, with 4,256 hits. Second is Ty Cobb at 4,189 — a gap of 67 (1.6% clear of the field).

Career leader tables are not rankings of the moment; they are archaeology. Every name on this one — Pete Rose, Ty Cobb, Hank Aaron, Stan Musial, Tris Speaker — built their total across a full career, in eras with different schedules, different equipment and different rules. The First Class: Canadian Lacrosse Hall of Fame and the 1965 Inductees

PLL Desk · PLL · Sport on Earth

November 2, 2026

Every hall of fame is founded twice: once when the building opens, and once when the first class walks in. For the Canadian Lacrosse Hall of Fame in New Westminster, British Columbia, Canada, that moment came in 1965, when 48 names were inducted together: Fred C. Waghorne, Snr. (1866–1956), Lionel "Big Train" Conacher (1900–1954), Édouard "Newsy" Lalonde (1887–1970), Bill Anthony (1913–1978), Henry "Hawkeye" Baker, Dr. William George Beers (1843–1900). The roll this site carries now runs to 633 inductees — and it still begins with them.

A first class does double work. It honors the founders, and it sets the standard every later class is measured against: get the first names wrong and the hall argues with itself forever. This hall did not get them wrong — the first class remains the roll’s center of gravity, the names later inductees are photographed beside.

Founded on a Line in the Record: The ITTF Story

ITTF Desk · ITTF · Sport on Earth

November 2, 2026

The ITTF file this site carries opens with a single line: International Table Tennis Federation founded in 1926, in Berlin in January and in London in December.. Everything else about the league — its identity as The world governing body for table tennis, organiser of the World Table Tennis Championships. — flows from that founding and what it absorbed along the way.

The International Table Tennis Federation was co-founded by Ivor Montagu and William Henry Lawes and was established in Berlin in January 1926 and in London in December of that year. That is the record’s own opening, and it is the right place to start, because this league’s history is not a straight line but a braiding — of rival competitions, changing cities and a game that kept renegotiating what it was.

TRAINING

Training — Train for Your Sport

At /training/ — drill libraries and sample weeks, written for the site.

The Training section lives at /training/, with a page per sport — the built tree carries 457 sport directories alongside its index. Its curriculum data, prepared for this expansion, covers 27 sports with 166 drills: each drill names what it develops, gives step-by-step how-to and a sets/reps or duration dose, and each sport carries a sample training week.

Sports in the curriculum data: Basketball, American Football, Baseball, Ice Hockey, Football (Soccer), Tennis, Golf, Cricket, Rugby Union, Badminton, Cycling, Boxing, Wrestling, Surfing, Australian Rules Football, Motorsport, Table Tennis, Gaelic Football, Hurling, Ten-pin Bowling, Darts, Lacrosse, Mixed Martial Arts, Snooker, Chess, Esports, Handball.

The companion section, Fuel — Eat for Your Sport at /fuel/ (459 sport directories in the built tree), applies the same per-sport treatment to eating for the sport.

Drills are standard coaching knowledge written in the site's own words, as the curriculum file itself states. Sports outside the curriculum data are not described here as covered.

The Rehab Hub

Modalities, phased protocols and return-to-play frameworks — educational reference only.

The Rehab Hub's data, prepared for this expansion, is an educational reference built from standard sports-medicine teaching, in the desk's own words. It carries 17 modality families — among them Cryotherapy (cold therapy), Thermotherapy (heat therapy), Electrotherapy and NMES, Therapeutic ultrasound — each with what it is, when it is most often used, and its cautions; phased protocol structures; return-to-play criteria frameworks; and original, unofficial practice questions drawn on the published curriculum outlines the data names.

Its disclaimer is printed on the data itself and the magazine repeats it in full:

> Educational reference only — not medical advice. Nothing in the Rehab Hub diagnoses, treats or clears any individual injury. Rehabilitation is prescribed and progressed by licensed clinicians (physicians, physical therapists, certified athletic trainers and other licensed providers) who have examined the athlete. An injured athlete should be assessed in person before starting, changing or ending any program.…

Nothing in the Rehab Hub diagnoses, treats or clears any individual injury — that line is the section's own, and it governs this page too.

Expert Guides — How Each Sport Works

Terminology, playing essentials and basic strategy, in the desk’s own words.

The Expert Guides data covers 26 sports with 335 defined terms between them, plus playing essentials and basic strategy for each — standard terminology and essentials, written in the desk's own words, with keys matched to the site's desk sports.

Guides on file: Basketball, American Football, Baseball, Ice Hockey, Football (Soccer), Tennis, Golf, Cricket, Rugby Union, Badminton, Cycling, Boxing, Wrestling, Surfing, Australian Rules Football, Motorsport, Table Tennis, Gaelic Football, Hurling, Ten-pin Bowling, Darts, Lacrosse, Mixed Martial Arts, Chess, Esports, Handball.

As an example of the form, the basketball guide defines, among its terms: Field goal, Three-point arc, Free throw, Rebound, Assist, Turnover — each with a plain definition a new follower can use on first reading.

Guides exist for the sports listed above. The other sports on the site carry their one-line guide and encyclopedia entry on their sport pages instead.

GAMES

The Games Room

At /games/ — the site’s own playable arcade, plus Top Sport on Earth, the Grand Prix and the simulators.

The Games page (/games/) hosts the site's own in-page arcade: Three-Point Shootout, Hoops Blitz, Free Throw Frenzy, Around the World, Buzzer Beater, Dunk Contest, Full-Court Press, Lane Bandit and Board Battle, with Top Sport on Earth among the in-page games and three VR games in the same room, plus Pinball in the themes the game itself carries.

Around it sit the site's other game pages: Top Sport on Earth at /top-trumps/, the Grand Prix at /grand-prix/, Mock Draft Simulators at /mock-draft/ — nine drafts are selectable there, each labelled with the simulation basis its data carries — and Daily Trivia at /trivia/.

On the sport pages, a Games module links only the games that genuinely apply to that sport; sports with no sport-specific game say so plainly and carry the all-sport games (Daily Trivia and Top Sport on Earth) instead.

Third-party embed sections of the games page are not the site's own games and are not toured here as such.

The Lab — Small Interactive Experiments

The homepage’s Lab tab, and the sport-page Lab modules that link to it honestly.

The Lab is the homepage's tab of small interactive experiments — its own description there is exactly that: small interactive experiments, pick one. On the sport pages, the Lab module is deliberately honest about reach: the basketball family (basketball and its 3x3 and freestyle variants) carries a dedicated Lab module, and every other sport's module links out to the general experiment — Physics Arena, at /games/#physics-arena — and to the homepage Lab tab, rather than pretending a per-sport lab exists where none was built.

That pattern — link to what exists, label what does not — is the same one the magazine follows on every page of this tour.

No new lab widget was built for the sport-page modules; the module is an honest link-out, as its own build report states.

The Living Story — Every Sport, As It Unfolds

At /living/ — one unfolding story surface for the whole sporting world.

The Living Story, at /living/, carries the site's own title for itself: Living Story: Every Sport, As It Unfolds. Its page opens with a sport picker — Pick a sport — and filters, so the unfolding story is read one sport at a time rather than as one blended feed: the same separation the site keeps everywhere between news from around the world and the desk's own writing.

It belongs in this tour because it is the front door to the site's continuing coverage: the desks file, the news file gathers, and the Living Story is where the site presents that material as a single unfolding read.

Described from the page's own headings and controls, as built.

Green Initiatives — Sport, Run Lighter

Original desk guidance, plus verified programs only — everything unverified was left out.

The Green Initiatives data is in two parts, and the distinction is the point. First, 8 practice areas of original guidance written by the desk — Venue energy, Venue water, Waste and materials, Team travel, Fan travel, Kit and equipment, Grounds and earth care, Food and drink — covering how venues and sports organisations can meter, light, heat, water and procure with a lighter footprint. No external claims are made in that part.

Second, 9 verified program entries: real programs, each checked during this expansion and each naming its source organisation on the page. Anything that could not be verified in that pass was left out — the data file keeps its own omitted list (7 entries) rather than printing an unverified claim.

The magazine prints the counts and the method. The entries themselves, with their named sources, live on the section's own pages.

WRITING

The Writing Desks

At /writing/ — news and journalism kept in separate sections, never one blended feed.

The Writing section organises everything the desk publishes by kind. Its index links 12 section pages, including:

More Top stories →	/writing/top-stories/
News Desk	/writing/news/
Stories	/writing/stories/
Columns	/writing/columns/
Interviews	/writing/interviews/
Essays	/writing/essays/
Deep dives	/writing/deep-dives/
Analytics & culture	/writing/analytics-culture/
Oddities & obscure	/writing/oddities-obscure/
Fandom	/writing/fandom/
Investigations	/writing/investigations/
Fan blogs	/writing/fan-blogs/

News stories from around the world and the journalists' own columns and stories are separate sections — on the Writing index, on every sport page (whose Writing Desk organises that sport's writing by section), and in this magazine, which prints desk pieces as features and news as news, never blended.

Every piece is published under the byline its desk file carries, and the magazine prints those bylines and dates exactly as carried.

RADIO

Radio — The Columns, Read Aloud

The site’s audio editions of its own desk columns — narration of the pieces themselves, nothing added.

Sport on Earth's radio material is its own desk writing, read aloud. The audio file (audio.json) carries 6 narrated columns, one MP3 per league desk in /audio/, played through the player script the site ships at /radio/radio-player.js. The narration source, as the audio file itself states, is each column's own summary text from summaries.json — title, takeaways and trends, verbatim; no new claims are recorded over the pieces.

Desks with a narrated edition include MiLB Double-A — Eastern League Desk, MiLB High-A — Midwest League Desk, MiLB Rookie — Arizona Complex League Desk, MiLB Rookie — Dominican Summer League Desk, MiLB Single-A — Carolina League Desk, MiLB Triple-A — International League Desk, among others in the file. Each entry in the file carries its duration, file size and a verified flag from the audio build — the magazine prints the count and the method, and the listening itself lives on the site beside the columns it narrates.

AROUND THE SITE

Hubs, Media, International — and the Rest of the Building

The directories and hubs that tie 446 sport pages into one site.

League Hubs (under /hubs/) gather each desk sport's leagues in one place, and Media Hubs (under /media/) gather the verified video pools per sport. The International Leagues Directory (/international/) carries soccer leagues worldwide with club and player pages, and basketball abroad.

League player directories: this expansion built 17 directory pages under the league pages (/sports/<sport>/<league>/players/), grouping every player record by team and linking each name to that player's own page.

Also on the site, and part of the tour: Behind the Play (/behind-the-play/), Global Arena (/global-arena/), the Governance Desk (/governance/), Lost Sports (/lost-sports/ — the archive where defunct leagues' histories of record are kept), Era Logos (/logo-gallery/), the Copy Editor (/copy-editor/), Corrections & Clarifications (/corrections/) and the Code of Ethics (/ethics/) — the two ledgers this magazine's own sourcing notes point back to.

And the practicalities: Fuel and Training (pages 39 of this tour), the Shop (/shop/), accounts at /account/, an RSS feed at /feed.xml, and the installable app treatment — Sport on Earth is built to be installed, manifest and service worker included, like the rest of the network's sites.

The modern NBA's pace-and-space era did not appear from nowhere. Its spacing grammar — width, depth, the extra pass and the third runner — was refined for decades on European soccer pitches and in European basketball gyms, and it crossed the Atlantic with the players and coaches who grew up inside it.

Start with the problem every soccer coach in Europe is raised on: a defence that can sit in a compact block leaves no room where it stands, so space has to be manufactured. Attacking teams stretch the block horizontally by holding genuine width on both flanks, and vertically by pinning its last line with depth, so that the block must choose which space to surrender. The ball is then moved faster than the block can shift, and the decisive run is often made by the third player — not the passer, not the receiver, but the runner arriving into the space the…

The United World Wrestling file this site carries opens with a single line: Federation traces its formation to 1912, with the first wrestling-only international body formed at the Stockholm Olympics; renamed United World Wrestling in September 2014. In 2026 that founding sits 114 years back — 114 years of seasons, champions and arguments, all of them interest on one decision.

The file describes the league's identity as The international governing body for amateur wrestling, overseeing Olympic freestyle and Greco-Roman., absorbing FILA (Federation Internationale des Luttes Associees); earlier Internationaler Ring Verband (1912) and International Amateur Wrestling Federation (1921) along the way. Institutions rarely stay what their founders filed; the honest ones keep the founding line where readers can check the distance travelled.

The First Class: College Football Hall of Fame and the 1888 Inductees

NFL Desk · NFL · Sport on Earth

November 2, 2026

Every hall of fame is founded twice: once when the building opens, and once when the first class walks in. For the College Football Hall of Fame in Atlanta, Georgia, United States, that moment came in 1888, when 1 names were inducted together: Walter Camp. The roll this site carries now runs to 1,360 inductees — and it still begins with them.

A first class does double work. It honors the founders, and it sets the standard every later class is measured against: get the first names wrong and the hall argues with itself forever. This hall did not get them wrong — the first class remains the roll's center of gravity, the names later inductees are photographed beside.

FEATURE · AUSTRALIAN RULES FOOTBALL

Founded on a Line in the Record: The AFL Story

AFL Desk · AFL · Sport on Earth

November 2, 2026

The AFL file this site carries opens with a single line: Founded in 1896 as the Victorian Football League, with its first season in 1897; renamed AFL in 1990.. Everything else about the league — its identity as The pre-eminent professional competition in Australian rules football. — flows from that founding and what it absorbed along the way: A breakaway from the Victorian Football Association (VFA).

The Australian Football League was originally named the Victorian Football League and was founded in 1896 as a breakaway competition from the Victorian Football Association, with its inaugural season in 1897. That is the record's own opening, and it is the right place to start, because this league's history is not a straight line but a braiding — of rival competitions, changing cities and a game that kept renegotiating what it was.

THE CENSUS

The Named Remainder

What the hall record does not carry, printed as plainly as what it does.

62 sports carry a hall record on this site; the other 384 have no recognised hall in the record, and their sport pages say so rather than inventing one. Some halls exist whose inductee lists are not published in a parseable table; those halls are named on their sport pages with exactly that note, and no names are carried for them.

The deepening this magazine points at lives on the site: the Hall of Fame directory at /hall-of-fame/ gives every inductee the site's wider record carries — a directory line, a desk or news mention, a line in a league history — a profile page of their own, assembled only from that carried record. Everyone else is named in the hall lists, which is the honest remainder: a name, a class year and a hall, never a biography the record does not contain.

No inductee, year or honour appears in this issue that is not in the parsed published lists.

PLAYBOOKS — ONE PER SPORT	GAME GUIDES	LEAGUE ARCHIVES ON THE BENCH	SEASONS ON THE BENCH

Every sport on the site carries a Playbook — its set plays or its tactics and strategy book, written from the sport's own record — and every game carries a guide written from the game's own code. Around them sits the Tools Bench at /tools/: the tournament planner, the referee trainer built from the rule dossiers, the era normalizer over the archives above, and the rest of the bench, each tool printing the basis it computes from.

The bench's reading rooms: the Sports Law directory (/law/), the Front Office (/front-office/), the Hall of Fame directory (/hall-of-fame/), era-by-era Timelines (/timelines/), the reorganised Calendars (/calendars/), the News Archive (/news/), the Labs hub (/labs/) and the Books (/books/) — a comic and a colouring book in the site's own style.

Counts are the built tree at the moment of building: playbook and game-guide directories under /playbooks/, archives in the bench index.

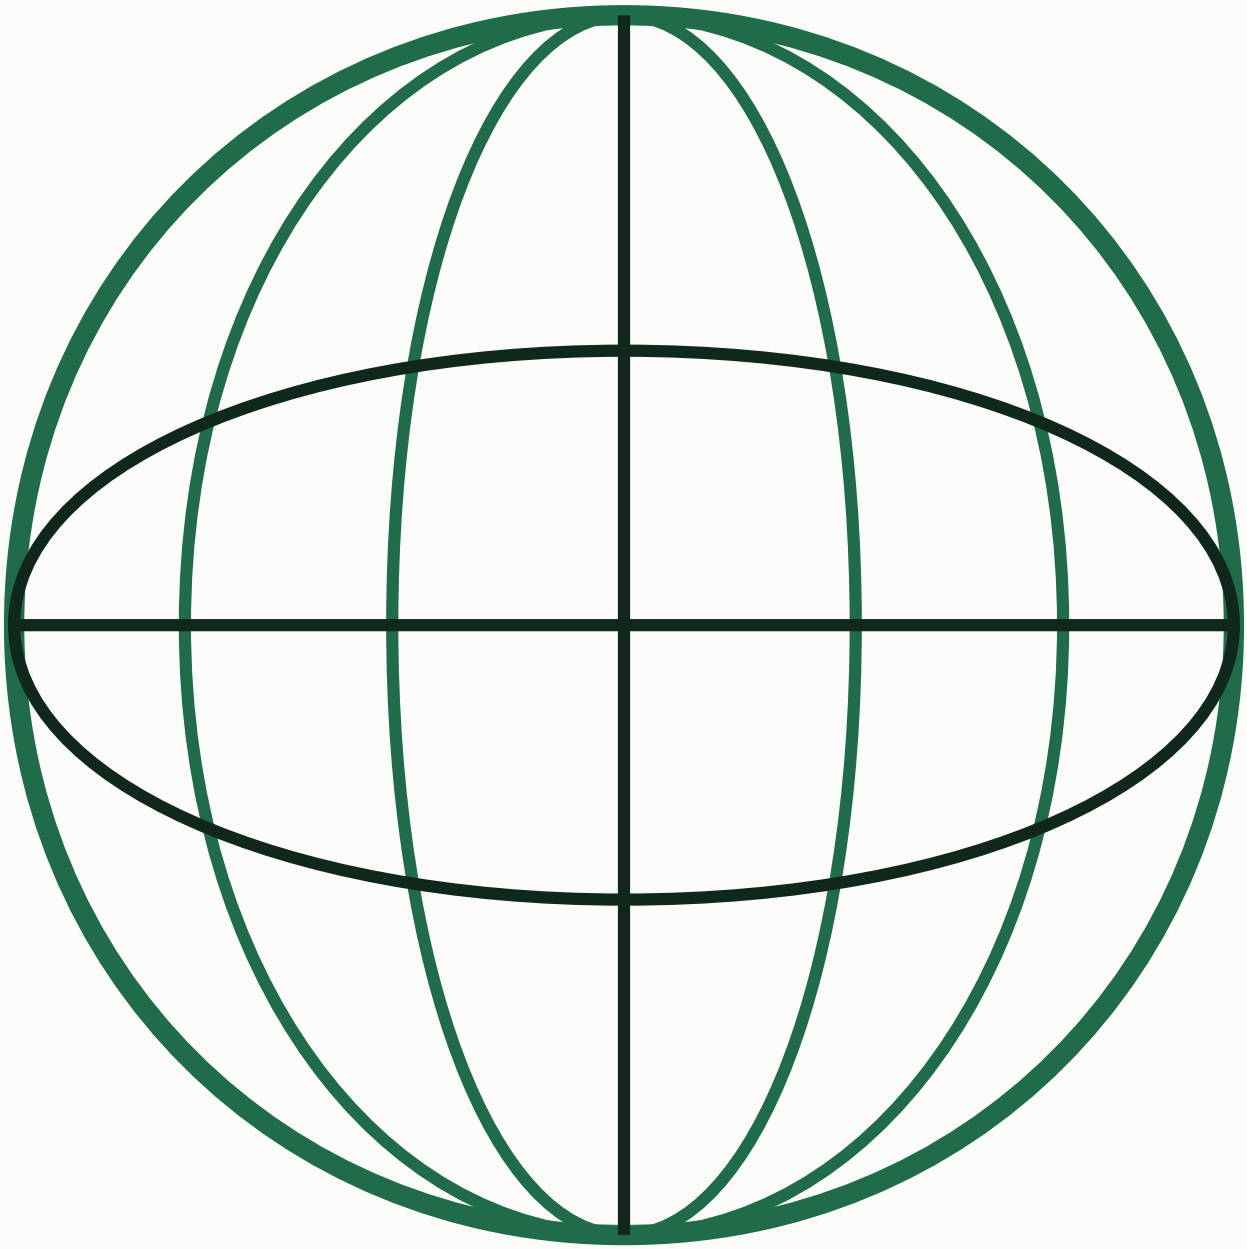
ILLUSTRATED PLATE

Plate I — The Globe

The site’s own mark, drawn the way the shop draws it: a globe of meridians over the wordmark.



The globe is Sport on Earth's mark — drawn programmatically for the site's shop and galleries, never traced from anyone else's artwork: a circle of meridians and parallels, in the site's deep green. The mark is drawn 446 more times, once inside every sport's own badge, and the Logo Gallery keeps the design-era plates it inspired. This plate is the magazine's own drawing of the same mark, at magazine size.

Illustration: drawn in code for this issue, in the site's palette — the same construction the shop's design files use.

Plate II — The Modern Marks

Two of the site’s design-era emblems, from the Logo Gallery’s own artwork files.

2000s — Swoosh-Era Minimal

Today — Modern Minimal

The Logo Gallery (/logo-gallery/) keeps eight original Sport on Earth emblems, one per design era, each drawn for the site and each labelled emblem-only — the wordmark beside them is set in type, never baked into the artwork. These two close the set: the 2000s' single sweeping curve, and today's one-line globe that has to survive as an app icon, an avatar and a shirt chest alike.

How This Magazine Was Made

Sources, methods and the gaps — printed, per house rule.

Sources

Every page derives from the site's own files: desk.json (335 pieces), news.json (1055 items), summaries.json (538 summaries, 2093 metric rows), sport-videos.json (12,055 verified videos), league-histories.json (44 leagues), the homepage's sport data (446 sports), and the expansion-2 curriculum data for Training, Rehab, Guides and Green. Features are excerpts of the site pieces named on their pages, with the desk bylines and dates as the data carries them; a piece whose file carries no date is printed as carrying none.

Method

One page list, built once by scripts/build_magazine.py, drives both editions: the on-screen reader (one HTML page loading chunked JSON) and the printable PDF (one magazine page per PDF page, Letter portrait). Both counts are verified by the builder and printed in its report; if they ever disagree, the builder fails rather than shipping.

Gaps, printed plainly

422 of the 446 sports have no desk yet — their spotlights say so. 395 sports carry no news items. 44 leagues have verified histories; the rest carry none and invent none. The Rehab, Guides and Green tours describe the expansion's data files; where a companion build owns a section's public pages, this magazine describes the data on file, not pages it did not build.

Sport on Earth's material is Sport on Earth's: no other publication, league platform or network is credited anywhere in this issue.
